In the novel A Murder is Announced, Miss Amy Murgatroyd lived on a farm with Miss Hinchcliffe. She was able to see who left the room in the darkness, just before the shooting at Little Paddocks, because she was standing behind the door, and so was not dazzled by the flashlight. She was fat and amiable, with a "curly bird's nest of grey hair".

A Murder is announced is considered as one of the best of Marple stories. This is also my first Marple novel and I was very keen to compare her with other Christie legend Hercule Poirot. The plot is quite extraordinary-in a local newspaper a murder is announced at a particular house at a specific time.
