Ethnic Conflict and International Security | Foreign Affairs
Ethnic conflict is one of the major threats to international peace and security. Conflicts in the Balkans, Rwanda, Chechnya, Iraq, Indonesia, Sri Lanka, India, and Darfur, as well as in Israel, the West Bank, and the Gaza Strip, are among the best-known and deadliest examples from the late 20th and early 21st centuries. The destabilization of provinces, states, and, in some cases, even whole regions is a common consequence of ethnic violence.

Ethnic conflict | Britannica
The security dilemma can be used explain and predict ethnic conflict within a given state. Posen's argument is supported by the belief that the basic tenets of realism provide a clear view of the security dilemma and its relationship with ethnic conflict. I believe the security dilemma in general is largely based in realist theory, and therefore fails to view international relations fairly.

Ethnic conflicts have international feature in each of these cases. The scientific approaches to the process of internationalization of ethnic conflicts in the Cold War were purely from a domestic aspect. It is not so difficult to realize this. Because the rigid bipolar system did not allow such confrontations to take violent character and expand.
