Renato Constantino - The Miseducation of the Filipino

If Teodoro Agoncillo was the Moses of the class-conflict theory of the Philippine Revolution, the historian Renato Constantino was its Joshua—he led their followers into the promised land. Since the late 1960s, the rich-versus-poor theory has become mainstream fare, even conventional wisdom; despite the efforts of the director and the cast of “Heneral Luna” to add layers of nuance to their interpretation of history, for instance, the movie’s narrative momentum leads easily to a ...

Renato Constantino was a Filipino historian known for being part of the leftist tradition of Philippine historiography. Apart from being a historian, Constantino was also engaged in foreign service, working for the Philippine Mission to the United Nations and the Department of Foreign Affairs. For his academic contributions to the fight against the Marcos dictatorship, his name is inscribed on the Wall of Remembrance at the Philippines' Bantayog ng mga Bayani. He is the father of former Civil Se

Posted on January 11, 2017 by Staff Contributor. The writings of Renato Constantino were a major influence in the intellectual formation of countless young Filipinos who staked their lives and future in opposing the Marcos dictatorship. At a time when the dominant, elitist view of Philippine-American relations was one of benevolence and mutual benefit, Constantino pointed out that on the contrary, our subservience to the interests of the United States had resulted in stunted growth.

CONSTANTINO, Renato R. - Bantayog ng mga Bayani

During the Filipino-Japanese war, Renato fought in Bataan and later was member of an intelligence team monitoring Japanese military movements. After the war, he joined the Philippine Mission to the United Nations from 1946 to 1949 and served as counselor of the Department of Foreign Affairs from 1949 to 1951.

CONSTANTINO, Renato | The Nameless

703. Prof. Renato Constantino, in his essay entitled "The Miseducation of the Filipino", writes about the coming about of the miseducation and the consequences of such action in the lives of the Filipinos, then, now, and perhaps the future. Promoting and imposing the "unFilipino" identity in Filipinos was the miseducation that Americans pursued during the time when they "posed" as a benevolent ally to the Philippines, and they proved victorious indeed because they had completely ...
